

#MeToo trends in SA as women share stories of sexual harassment

By Julia Breakey

17 Oct 2017

Over the weekend, actress Alyssa Milano encouraged women to tweet the hashtag #MeToo if they had ever been sexually harassed, assaulted, or abused - and by Tuesday morning it was trending in the top spot in South Africa.

Image source: © Memeburn

“ Just finished reading #Khwezi and decided to come detox on these streets. Then I see #MeToo. Women are going through the most #Khwezi— Thabi Pebane (@Thabip) October 16, 2017 ”

The hashtag is in response to the Harvey Weinstein scandal that revealed Hollywood's deep sexual harassment problem. Weinstein, one of the most influential producers in the industry, was found by The New York Times to have covered up three decades of sexual harassment allegations.

The New Yorker subsequently published a recording of Weinstein admitting he had groped an Italian model. He then begged her to watch him shower.

In an effort to broaden the discussion, Milano began #MeToo as a way to prove that the issue is endemic to not just one industry, but society as a whole.

“ If you've been sexually harassed or assaulted write 'me too' as a reply to this tweet. pic.twitter.com/k2oeCiUf9n— Alyssa Milano (@Alyssa_Milano) October 15, 2017 ”

The tag was quickly picked up, and was widely popular in South Africa, where women face a high rate of sexual assault.

“ #MeToo

Stand Up Against Sexual Harassment and Assault!!— #BLACKDIAMOND (@LungiNaidoo) October 16, 2017 ”

“ The complicity of so many to keep sexual assault, abuse and harassment buried needs to end. You're not saving face. Just stop. #MeToo— munchkin (@Feiawesomeol) October 16, 2017 ”

“ Immensely proud of all who shared #metoo stories. Hoping the ripples become a tidal wave of societal change—

Alexis Telfer (@AlexisTelfer) October 17, 2017 ”

Though most welcomed the tag as a means to have their stories heard, others didn't want to perform their trauma for people on Twitter so that a problem could be understood.

“ A #womxn in my family publicly shamed me for not writing "#metoo" yesterday. Let that sink in 💎💎 sick

💎💎💎💎 of 💎💎💎💎 performing 💎💎💎💎 for 💎💎💎💎 you 💎💎💎💎— Kathryn Cleary (@clearlykath) October 17, 2017 ”

“ Reminder that if a woman didn't post #MeToo, it doesn't mean she wasn't sexually assaulted or harassed.

Survivors don't owe you their story.— Alexis Benveniste (@apbenven) October 16, 2017 ”

ABOUT JULIA BREakey

Julia is a junior writer at Memeburn; a UCT film graduate with a passion for dogs, media, and dog-centric media. If she's not gushing about the new television show that you need to watch, she's rewatching The Good Place (which you need to watch).

- Why is South Africa not watching South African movies? - 28 Feb 2018
- And the Saffa nominees are... - 5 Feb 2018
- #MarkFishChallenge: South African Twitter's latest meme - 25 Jan 2018
- 2017 in review: This year's absolute worst of the worst - 22 Dec 2017
- 2017 in review: The heinous horrors that got you angry this year - 21 Dec 2017

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>