

Emirates boost Algiers service with extra flight, becomes daily

Emirates Airlines will be adding an extra flight to its service between Dubai and Algiers as of 13 December 2017, complementing Emirates' current six flights a week and making it a daily service. The additional flight will further boost inbound and outbound passenger traffic and cargo flow between Algeria and Dubai, and Emirates' worldwide network.

The new service will operate every Wednesday with an Emirates Boeing 777-300, in a three-class configuration offering eight seats in first class, 42 in business class and 310 in economy class.

“In line with healthy commercial demand, we are pleased to introduce an additional service to Algiers which will offer our customers even more choice and convenience to connect to Dubai and onward destinations, particularly in the Middle East, Far East, West Asia, Indian Ocean and Australia. This includes popular cities served by Emirates’ A380s such as Kuwait, Jeddah, Beijing, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Kuala Lumpur, Shanghai, Mumbai, Sydney and Melbourne.

More choice and convenience

“Algeria will become the fourth destination in North Africa to have a daily frequency, along with Casablanca, Tunis and Khartoum,” said Orhan Abbas, Emirates senior vice-president commercial operations for Africa.

Emirates launched services to Algiers on 1 March 2013, and in less than five years, the route has carried over half a million passengers and nearly 27,000 tonnes of cargo to date.

The country is home to a rich variety of architecture and a vibrant cultural scene with a diverse heritage of Phoenician, Roman, Byzantine, Ottoman and French influences. It boasts some of the world's most spectacular coastlines as well as vast mountainous and desert landscapes.

Customers travelling to and from Algeria can access more than 2,500 channels of visual and audio entertainment on the airline, featuring the latest movies, music, audio books and games, as well as family-friendly products and services for children, including complimentary toys, kids' meals and movies, priority boarding for families and the use of free strollers at Dubai International Airport.

The new flight will depart Dubai as EK757 at 8.10am and arrive in Algiers at 12.40pm. The return flight EK758 will depart Algiers at 3.10pm and arrive in Dubai at 12.40am the next day.
