

Phumelela Malinga of By Phume on filling a gap in the fashion market

14 Jun 2021

Phumelela Malinga, the 27-year-old mechanical designer-turned-fashion designer, chats to us about switching gears, founding his androgynous designer apparel brand By Phume and being invited to be part of the 2020 Design Indaba Emerging Creatives Programme.

Phumelela Malinga - © Lawrence Symonds

III What was the inspiration behind By Phume?

By Phume is an androgynous designer apparel brand. The inspiration behind the brand is making eye-catching statements using bold design, quality, craftsmanship and colour. The brand originated from the lack of variety in the retail clothing market. Naturally, I saw the gap in the market and set out to fill it.

How did you transition from mechanical engineer to fashion designer?

Growing up, I always dreamt of being a Formula 1 driver. However, getting into racing is very expensive and I could never quite get started. The second-best thing was studying mechanical engineering in order to be at least close to the cars.

While I was studying at the University of Pretoria, I really got into modelling and fashion.

Design was drilled into my DNA. I found it easy to conceptualise ideas and communicate them to people. This is how I fell in love with fashion design. What really catalysed the transition is howwell my designs were received by my peers.

© Asanele Mfengu

How would you describe your aesthetic and style when it comes to your designs?

I am really fascinated by Japanese fashion. I mimic their silhouettes a lot in my designs. But if I summarised the overall aesthetic, it would be hippie/punk.

III Why the decision to focus on an androgynous style of clothing?

Androgynous fashion is a massive trend. I initially made my designs for the stylish and progressive gent. However, when I launched my initial pieces, the ladies screamed the loudest. I could not ignore them. When I launched the brand, I added androgyny as my fundamental design principle.

© Asanele Mfengu

III What have been some of your career highlights?

Making my first sale was pretty satisfying! My career highlights in the fashion industry include being invited to be part of the Design Indaba Emerging Creatives Programme in 2020. Some of South Africa's most celebrated artists such as Laduma of Maxhosa have been part of that programme. So, for me, it was very encouraging to be considered as a talented creative on such a massive and inspirational platform.

III What advice would you give to aspiring young creatives?

Own race, own pace! Start small. Develop your craft. Collaborate with your peers. Have fun with it.

© Asanele Mfengu

© Asanele Mfengu

Ⅲ If you could give a message to your younger self, what would it be?

Life is lit young blood. Every single day is a blessing. Don't waste it on just anything or with just anyone. Be intentional.

Ⅲ Where do you see yourself in five years' time?

Honestly, I'm prepared for my mind to be blown. That's what I am working towards.

For more #YouthMatters content and interviews, visit:

https://www.bizcommunity.com/YouthMatters

ABOUT RUTH COOPER

- Ruth is the production manager at Bizcommunity. ruth@bizcommunity.com

 In Review: La Colombe's winter special menu 6 Jul 2023

 Sleep in a working vineyard at Creation Wines' luxurious Voormanshuis 2 Dec 2022

 Heritage meets health with Creation Wines' new wine and food pairing 30 Nov 2022

 5 reasons to stay at off the grid Gonana Guest House in Paternoster 10 Jun 2022

 In review: Staying at historic D'Olyfboomguest farmin Paarl 22 Sep 2021

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: https://www.bizcommunity.com