

The do's of social media marketing

 By Jessica Barrella

15 Oct 2019

As someone has so aptly said, when you are in any doubt as to the appropriateness of something you intend posting, apply the golden rule: WWGT (what would Granny think?).

Image credit: LUMBN on Unsplash.

This might make you laugh, but jokes aside, it is very important to follow proper online etiquette in order to maximise your effectiveness on social media.

The don'ts of social media marketing

Jessica Barrella 18 Sep 2019

Here are a few tips to help you along:

Be yourself

As obvious as this may sound, there are many people who create an alternate persona online. Nooo! Being authentic goes a long way to building a loyal following who want to engage with you.

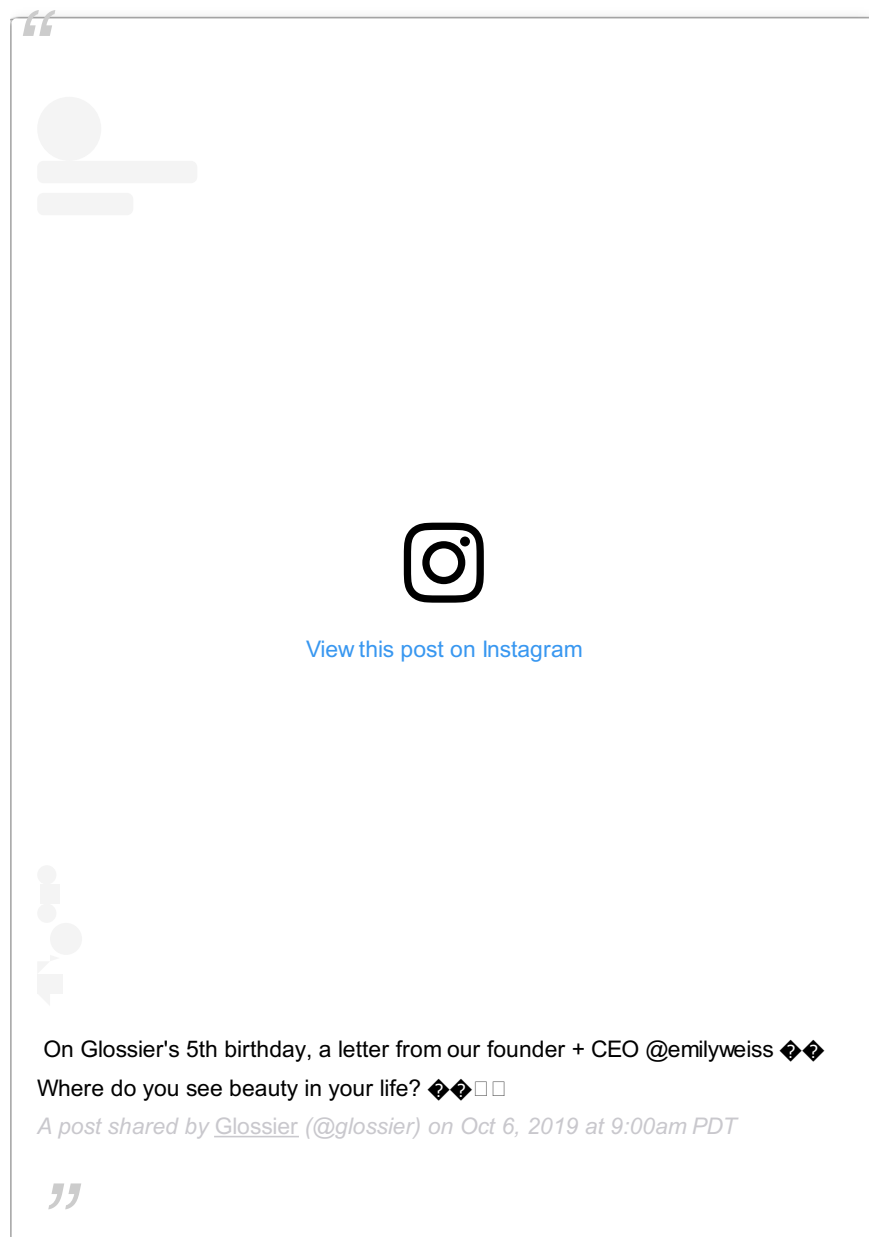

People can spot a fake! Putting a face behind your brand makes it approachable, reachable and something people can relate to. Also, don't be afraid to share your failures.

Cultivate relationships

Nurture your existing relationships whilst building new one because isn't that the reason you are on social media? Be real, be human. Cultivate a two-way conversation and have fun with it. Don't ignore your audience but respond to their comments.

All these things and more build lasting relationships – which, in turn, converts to lasting customers. Build connections online just like you would in person.

Prioritise your networks

You do not have to be on every single platform. Choose the ones that are used by your target market and stick to doing things well there, e.g. LinkedIn is definitely best for B2B businesses.

SA's top CEOs prefer LinkedIn, MTN's Rob Shuter leads on Twitter

10 Sep 2019

Choose the right content

Select the right content for the right network, e.g. you can have more fun on Facebook and Instagram whereas LinkedIn is more serious as it has a more business tone.

Entertain and inform your audience by using videos and photos. The generally accepted guide is 80% should be relational and only 20% sales.

How does social media support sales?

Jessica Barrella 15 Aug 2019

Set realistic expectations

It is important to realise that social media alone will not make your sales soar through the roof.

Yes, it can build brand awareness and confidence but there are other factors that contribute to your brand being profitable, e.g. the performance of your website and the quality of your products.

How to avoid online campaign disasters

Madelain Roscher 28 Aug 2019

Write with your readers in mind

Focus on making your content attractive to your audience and write in a way that is easy to understand. This does not necessarily mean you have to dumb down the content but do simplify it and avoid business jargon that your readers will not identify with.

And, most importantly, use spell check. There's nothing worse than a post that has spelling and grammar mistakes – this is a sure way to dent your credibility.

5 Common mistakes we all make on social media

18 Sep 2019

Be visually appealing

Photos and videos are known to attract engagement. This can be anything from a product image to behind-the-scenes video or even DIY videos.

Canva is a great tool to use to create unique and engaging images. Gifs are also a great way to create humour and attract attention. So, use them to jazz up your posts and have fun.

Separate business from personal

This may be obvious but what your favourite series is, photos of your son playing football, or your opinion of the Idols winner belong on your personal page and not your business profile.

Your business page is all about your brand – so keep it that way.

Don't share everything on social media

4 Sep 2019

Share stories

The news certainly gets people talking but make sure that you share in news that is in some way relevant to your brand.

This tactic can really boost engagement, but bear these points in mind:

- Do not share personal opinions unless you want to start an online war
- Do not talk about politics. Never, ever, ever
- Do not share about tragedies

There are lots of positive stories out there. Find some that relate to your brand and start a conversation with your audience.

In conclusion, social media is essential for marketing your business. Stay on track by keeping your brand and its values in mind as you implement some of these tips.

Get in on the game and you will boost your online presence and reap positive results.

ABOUT JESSICA BARRELLA

Jessica Barrella is passionate about helping other small businesses and entrepreneurs reach the next level with solid marketing.

- The next decade of digital marketing - 19 Feb 2020
- The do's of social media marketing - 15 Oct 2019
- The don'ts of social media marketing - 18 Sep 2019
- How does social media support sales? - 15 Aug 2019

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>