

Municipal elections: Research indicates that South Africans will head to the polls

By Tessa Baron, issued by KLA

28 Oct 2021

With the South African municipal elections due to be held next week on 1 November, all attention has been on municipal politics for some time now. The burning question is - will South Africans seize the opportunity to make their voices heard? We did some research to find the answer.

Tessa Baron

South Africans are hungry for change

According to our data, and a recent online survey completed on the topic (amongst our online panel of South African adults), South Africans are hungry for change and are wanting to see a different political representation to what is currently in place at a municipal level. Only 21% want to see the current party retain its leadership position in their ward/region, while 44% are hoping that a different party will take up the reins in their ward.

13% are hoping that an independent candidate will win, and 22% are hoping that a newly established party will succeed in taking over. These results signal definite opportunities for new parties and independents to rise to the top and show South Africans what they / their parties are capable of.

What are you hoping for as an outcome of the municipal elections?

But will South Africans go and vote, and will they vote accordingly?

The 2016 municipal elections saw voter turnout at 58%. As we head to voting stations on 1 November, 68% of the respondents say they are definitely going to vote, 21% are unsure if they will vote, and 11% are definitely not going to vote.

Are you voting in the upcoming municipal election?

- You are definitely voting in the municipal elections
- You are not sure if you are going to vote in the municipal elections
- You are NOT going to vote in the municipal elections

While the desire for change is high, 34% of respondents say that they will be voting for the same party they have always vote for. Just over a third will be changing their vote and voting for a different party. And 20% have yet to decide who they will be voting for.

To summarise, a fifth of respondents are undecided about whether they will vote at all, and many are still unsure as to where they will place their 'X'.

Voting is crucial if you want change

While we noted some apathy around voting in the past, South Africans do seem to be optimistic about the power and possibility for improvement that elections can bring. 56% feel that it is important to exercise their right to vote, and 28% feel that they are voting in this election with the hope for change and better run municipalities.

When it comes to the more apathetic attitudes around voting, we see very low percentages:

- 4% don't care about municipal elections
- 7% don't feel it will make a difference
- 4% feel that all parties are mostly the same, so it doesn't matter who you vote for

With South Africans exhibiting positive attitudes towards voting and a desire for change, will this election effectively reflect the change that the public are saying they want?

For more information on this research, please contact Tessa at KLA: tessab@kla.co.za.

About KLA

We're a full-service market research agency known for taking on clients' challenges and working alongside them to find solutions. We get that marketing strategy, brand consulting and UX are part of the picture. That performance, bottom lines and results matter. That the world is complex and competitive. And that distillation is as important as interpretation.

We get that there's something bigger than data; that designing smart research means asking the right questions, in order to see the world through a different lens. We get that meaningful work comes from authentic connections, and that partnership is the bridge between goals and successes. We get to the bottom of what people really think. And why.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Tessa Baron, Account Manager at KLA.

- Consumer insights company, KLA delves into voter sentiment ahead of the SA elections 17 May 2024
- Consumer insights agency, KLA, reveals the Quarterly Buzz results for Q1 2024 7 May 2024
- Insights on vaping in South Africa 27 Mar 2024
- The rise of podcasting in South Africa – a growing opportunity for brands 20 Mar 2024
- Consumer insights agency, KLA, reveals the results of the 4th Quarterly Buzz report 15 Feb 2024

KLA

We're a full-service market research agency know for taking on client's challenges and working alongside them to find solutions. So, when your business needs intelligence that moves the needle, at KLA, we get it!

Profile | News | Contact | Twitter | RSS Feed

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>