Known for producing high-quality products and digital solutions for laboratories worldwide which solve problems in a holistic way, Eppendorf is well-positioned to join its global peers in the Allandale precinct of Waterfall City.

Founded by Heinrich Netheler and Hans Hinz and headquartered in Hamburg, Germany, Eppendorf traces its roots back to 1945.

The company is probably best known for inventing the microliter system that revolutionised the lab in the 1960s, including the first piston-stroke pipette and the famous reaction vessel “Eppi®”. Currently Eppendorf employs about 5,000 people in over 33 countries.

Eppendorf finds residence in the Allandale building, an embodiment of Waterfall City's ethos of superior architectural design, sustainability, and environmental awareness. The city's innovative building practices ensure developments are built to the highest sustainable principles and practices, aligning well with Eppendorf's concrete and consistent pursuit of sustainability.

"Our decision to join Waterfall City represents more than just a strategic business move; it's a commitment to innovation, collaboration, and sustainability. We are excited to be part of one of SA's fastest-growing mixed-use hubs, where our values and objectives resonate deeply with the community.

Prime hub for innovative businesses

"We believe that Waterfall City is a world-class destination for businesses wanting to innovate and build technologies," said Kwame Sackitey, managing director of Eppendorf South Africa.

Waterfall City's strategic location next to the N1 highway and Allandale Road offers excellent visibility and accessibility within Gauteng, making it an attractive location for ultra-modern light and high-tech industrial, logistics, and distribution businesses. Having cross-functional teams on one site enables seamless collaboration, improved productivity, and increased customer satisfaction.

"Waterfall City continues to attract top-notch companies, and Eppendorf's deep-rooted commitment to sustainability aligns perfectly with our philosophy. We are thrilled to have Eppendorf as part of our innovative community.

"Their presence further solidifies Waterfall City's reputation as a hub for forward-thinking businesses driving positive change," said Debbie Theron, Attacq's head of property and asset management – mixed use and commercial.

At Allandale, Eppendorf joins well-known brands such as Reckitt Benckiser, Trans Africa, Centrafin, Eazi Access, and Allergan.
